

Blue and the Red Fern

by

Once upon a time, there was a wolf named Blue. He was different from the others.
He loved to party!

One day, the other wolves went to the mountains without him. He was sad when he realized he was alone. He did everything he could to stay busy. It never worked though. He howled as loud as he could. He threw rocks at the mountains. One day, the pack started to get sick and die, so they came back.

Blue was happy that the pack came back. He noticed they were sick and dying. He got his doctor stuff and started doing C.P.R. on them one-by-one, but they still didn't feel better. So, he went off to look for the red fern. The red fern will heal them. That was the hardest flower to find in the world.

He went through forests to find it. ~~find it~~ Then the trouble came. A bear attacked him. Blue just sat there. Then the weirdest thing happend! The bear exploded into a bunch of flowers. They were all blue except for one.
It was a red fern!

He grabbed it and ran 10,987 miles back. When he got there, he rubbed it all over the other wolves. They all got better. They had a party. Soon, he had a beautiful wife and children.

They lived happily ever after.
